Why is this online Goal Setting and Getting Things Done training course essential?

Goals are tools, not golden calves. Pessimists among ask may ask:

1. So, why do we need to set goals?
2. What difference will goal setting make?
3. What will anyone do differently because someone gave them a number or target to meet?

It is not unusual to find many people jaded at best about the value of goal-setting, given the stress created by what are often perceived as artificial expectations decreed from on high.

There is always the dilemma of trying to set targets low enough to be realistic, but high enough to be galvanising, exciting, and challenging. With this comprehensive Goal Setting and Getting Things Done training course, the learner will learn skills they can use in their daily personal and professional lives.
