Why is this Mental Capacity Act training course important?

The Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DoLS) was added in April 2009 as a supplement to the Mental Capacity Act.

As an outcome of the Mental Capacity Act:

- Doctors must be familiar with assessing capacity and making decisions on behalf of those lacking capacity. They must understand how the Act affects their practice.
- Healthcare professionals are under a formal duty to have regard to the Codes of Practice that accompany the Act.
- Professionals are able to identify incapacitated patients and provide a statutory basis for decision-making on their behalf.
- The general principles of assessing capacity are relevant to all doctors working within England and Wales, including within primary care.
